A DAY IN THE WILDS.

BY: ROBERT NORTH BRADBURY

Bill and Bob Bradbury are first shown leaving their camp on an exploration tour with "Rags", the dog their companion. Their first call is on Mrs. Woodpecker and her family and birdlings. The boys arrive at dinner time and see the mother bird feeding her young. As they continue their way, "Rags" discovers something in the branch of a tree and the youngsters cautiously approach and find that it is only a porcupine. A lasso is made and the porcupine is captured, but not until Bill has received a volley of quills. With their new companion, the boys continue on their way until they arrive at a trout stream. While Bill is hunting bait, Bob cuts a pole from a nearby sapling, fastens on the line, and makes a hook by bending an ordinary pin and shaping it. In a few moments the boys are finishing the day by frying fish over a camp fire.
